The White River Redskins Are Quiei On Their Reservation.

Here is the whole Indian scare in a nutsbed. When Special Indian Agent Harper was out here a few months ago he held a final council with the White River and the Unnah Utes in reference to their going back onto their old hunting grounds ecross the Colorado line, and the Indians at that time, through their head men, after talking over the situation with the special and regular agents, agreet that they wantling to back into Colorado. Old Sowawie, the bad man and chief of the White Rivers, was in the council, and, failing to carry any point demanded at that time, gave it out teat he was going home and make a good Indian of himself—that is, he was going home to die. He said Washington always had everything his own way, and to oppose Washington as the Unitahs were cowards and feared to assert their rights. Since this council, however, much dissatisfaction has been created among the Unitah Utes by reason of the fact.

This is the time of the year when the Navajoe and southern these come north to trade for buckeldn with the Ute tribes of these two reservations. There are also usually a few down from the Shoukones at this time of year. Buckelin is row becoming hard to get, even on the Colorado or Utah side of the line, and these visiting and trading Indians will go to any extremes to get it.

Washington (coisred), who was promoted for gallaint service at the battle of San Juan hill from sergeant major to second lieutenant, came in tonight from Fort Duchesne, on his way to Fort Thomas, Ky., where he will report for duty with the Forty-eighth infantry, to go to the Philippines.

He says tast for several days before teating the fort he saw a large number of Navajos around the reservation, and the talk among the Indians was that there were many more coming. These Indians were quietly working up a growd to go to Colorado. He considers it likely that the soldiers from Fort Fuchesne will be ordered out.

An interesting incident in the Besshi mine causing many was the final saving of twe miners who had been imprisoned in the earth for six days by the caving in of the entrance.

The remarkable course pursued by the empress downger of China continues to attract attention. Her severe temperary illness at first reported as due to poinon, is later interpreted as a political expedient to checkmate the schemes of the way for the help of the Japaness government in the person of Marquis its under whom needed reforms are to be made.

That this curlous plan is apocryptal is evident from the fact that the marquis has received an appointment as president of a new and imperiant burnau in the imperial heusehold of Japan which brings in into closer relations with the empress down and makes him more than ever the power behind the throne.

Now the drouth is over. The business men want raw and manufactured products, and have the money to pay for them. Is there anything wrong in that? Take pig iron, for instance. The high prices are owing to the demand, Pig iron is scarce, and that's why the price is high. As I said the other day, there is nothing in sight to disturb the business situation. The only thing that would change our prosperyus conditions could be the elevation to power of a political party which has threatened to reverse our present successful policy.

A little resolution introduced by Fernstrom at last night's meeting of the council precipitated a most acrinonious debate between the member from the Third and mayoralty candiiate Buckle. The resolution looked Buckle moved that the engineer be given a week more than the report provided for. In this he was vigorously opposed for in this he was vigorously opposed by Allen who proposed to limit Mr. Kelsey to Nov. I. Allen's amendment carried, only Buckle, Robertson, Diebl and Wallace voting against it. Then the report as amended was adopted, those voting against it being Buckle, Diebl, Fenstrom, Margetts and Robertson. Fernstrom explained that he voted against the proposition for the reason that he did not believe the report would be worth anything to the city after it was made.

The committee on streets at the tail end of the meeting reported in favor of allowing the grade on B street to remain as it was established some twelve years ago but that it be subject to certain modifications desired by the property owners. Buckle opposed the adoption of the report on the ground that its terms were not sufficiently clear. The matter was finally re-referred to the committee.

After the meeting Patrick, who lives on B street and who was specially interested in the matter, held Buckle up. "Didn't you tell me. George, he asked, "that you would lose the protest that you had against that report?"

Buckle couldn't or didn't deny the assertion. "I am getting tired of your dishonest methods, George," said Patrick. "You have not dealt fairly with me and I don't like it." Buckle made a feeble remonstrance and hurried out of the building.
